(ANOTHER GETTYSBURG ADDRESS)

Four squares and seven moons ago Mr. and Mrs. Roth brought forth on this continent a new boy-type child with the odd name of Ed, dedicated to the preposition that all squares should be emulsified.

Since then we have been engated in a fat spat, testing whether this hip-kid or any swinger can long endure. We are double-parked on the great drag-strip of that spat. We have come to dedicate the following adventures of Ed "Big Daddy" Roth to history, humanity and the Smithsonian Institution, although it is neither fitting nor proper that we should do this.

But, in a larger sense, we cannot communicate, we cannot glorify, we cannot stomach this book. The brave criminals who drew the following wack-a-daisical adventures of "Big Daddy" have done it far beyond the power of good taste to add or subtract. The squares will little note or long remember what we say about him, but they can never forgive the garbage written about him. It is far better that we hope that this scene shall not have been conceived in vain . . . that these dog-eared pages about the Roth, the whole Roth and nothing but the Roth, shall never perish from dear old terra-firma.
